Please reply to Youngworkers@unifor6008.com to join in participation.

Throughout this pandemic, our union has developed new ways for members to gather, organize and fight for a world that works better for workers.

Unifor young workers are no different.

The world we're leaving for the next generation of workers is not in great shape. Even before the pandemic hit, we knew that a climate crisis combined to an inequality crisis had the potential of leaving the young generation worst off than any other previously. It's fair to say that those concerns for the viability of good, decent jobs on a healthy planet are even more present today.

This fall, Unifor Young Workers are inviting you to participate in virtual events in the lead-up to the World Day for Decent Work on October 7, 2021.

In these difficult and trying times for everyone, Unifor Young Workers say: Our future is worth the fight.

This virtual series will include one informal gathering for young workers, one webinar open to all members, and an email conference that all interested members can sign up to. You will find more details and registration information for each virtual event below.

Local unions are encouraged to share this information with young workers in their membership. Please help us connect and reach out to as many young workers as possible in the coming weeks.

All events are free of charge.

Our future is worth the fight - Young Workers Zoom Gathering

Sunday, October 3 from 7:00 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Eastern Time

Open to Unifor members who are 35 years old and under.

Young workers are invited to join us for a fun, bilingual, informal gathering to hear from active and engaged Unifor young workers committee members and other young workers from across the country.
